

COACH K

UI / UX DIRECTION PROPOSAL

Four ways to make Coach K unforgettable.

A design & brand proposal for the Coach K app — four distinct directions, each a complete visual system for the landing experience and the daily Today screen. Pick one; we build it.

Same product. Four ways to be felt.

Coach K already works — living programs, readiness-aware training, honest feedback. The gap is presence: the current UI is functional but undifferentiated, with weak hierarchy and a dark-only tone that blends in. This proposal isn't four skins; each direction is a positioning decision about how an athlete should feel in the first three seconds.

What we fix

Clear one-action screens, stronger typographic hierarchy, and a brand stamp that's ownable — not generic "AI app."

What stays

The product logic, your story, the science, and the red-blooded, no-fluff coaching voice.

How to choose

Pick the feeling, not the color. Who is the athlete, and how should opening Coach K make them feel?

How to read each direction

1. Look at the phone first — that's the real landing + Today screen, to scale.
2. Read "the moment it creates" — the emotional job of the design.
3. Weigh strengths vs. watch-outs against your audience.

See them live & interactive

Local: `cd frontend && npm run dev` → open `http://localhost:5173/?design=1`

Deployed: `https://your-app.ondigitalocean.app/?design=1`

Or on the landing page footer → Preview UI directions.

DIRECTION 01

Iron Forge

A refinement of what you have — the dark gym with signal red — but with real hierarchy, one clear action per screen, and a stronger brand stamp.

THE MOMENT IT CREATES

"You open it before a heavy session and it feels like a coach, not a chatbot."

STRENGTHS

- Feels premium and focused
- Lowest migration risk from today
- Red accent reads as 'signal / act now'

WATCH-OUTS

- Dark-only can feel same-as-everyone
- Hardest to stand out in a crowded fitness market

BEST FOR

Positioning Coach K as a serious, private, premium coaching app for committed lifters.

DIRECTION 02

Day Court

Daylight athletics. Chalk-white canvas, deep court-green, and a burnt-orange accent — bright, legible, and unmistakably athletic.

THE MOMENT IT CREATES

"It feels like stepping onto a bright court — energized, not intimidated."

STRENGTHS

- Reads perfectly in bright gyms / sunlight
- Approachable — invites daily use
- Most differentiated from generic dark AI apps

WATCH-OUTS

- Biggest departure from current look
- Light UI needs disciplined contrast work

BEST FOR

Broadening appeal beyond hardcore lifters to everyday athletes who train in real gyms and outdoors.

DIRECTION 03

Film Cut

Cinematic and tungsten-warm. Deep blacks, a single gold accent, and Dayan's own image leading the frame — the film-room aesthetic.

THE MOMENT IT CREATES

"You trust it because you can see the person who built it."

STRENGTHS

- Most emotional / recruiting-ready
- Puts your real photo + story to work
- Warm gold feels crafted, not clinical

WATCH-OUTS

- Leans on strong photography over time
- Needs consistent image treatment to hold up

BEST FOR

Making Dayan the brand — story-led, personal, and premium. The coach IS the product.

DIRECTION 04

Signal Strip

High-contrast, poster-grade athletics. Black on white, condensed display type, and thin red rules — confident and loud without looking like a newspaper.

THE MOMENT IT CREATES

"It hypes you up — like a fight-night poster with your name on it."

STRENGTHS

- Instantly bold and memorable
- Condensed type scans fast on a phone
- Strong on social / marketing crops

WATCH-OUTS

- Loud tone won't fit every athlete
- Condensed type needs care for long text

BEST FOR

A bold, competitive brand for younger athletes who want swagger and speed.

At a glance

DIRECTION	FEELING	BEST AUDIENCE	RISK
Iron Forge	Serious, premium, private	Committed lifters	Low · looks familiar
Day Court	Bright, athletic, daily	Everyday athletes	Med · biggest change
Film Cut	Personal, cinematic, trusted	Story-led recruiting	Med · photo-dependent
Signal Strip	Bold, loud, competitive	Younger athletes	Med · tone not universal

OUR RECOMMENDATION

Lead with Film Cut – with Day Court as the bright alternate.

Coach K’s strongest, least-copyable asset is you – a real coach with a real story and a real face. Film Cut turns that into the brand: cinematic, warm, and trustworthy, with your photography doing the selling. If the goal is mass, daily approachability over story, Day Court is the pick – it’s the most differentiated from the sea of dark AI apps and reads beautifully in a bright gym. Iron Forge is the safe polish; Signal Strip is the boldest brand bet.
